With the British army band plassing Chopie's funeral march, the funeral procession marched through the cruoked streets, past the cathedral which stands on the highest point in town and then took its course along an undulating country road, now rising and now sinking between green hills. Along this country road country folk were clustered for the most part, perched on stone feuces behind the soldiers who guarded the road line entire two miles from the cathedral to the cemetery.

woman rushed to the side of one of the huge graves and asked to have the coffin in one corner raised. This was done, and trembling the woman bent over and gazed at the face within it. Then she shook her head and turned away. Apparently she had not found the one she sought.

Conducted by Hishop Browne, the Cathobe service was held first, the choir boys hearing incense appearing from a cluster of elms and coming to the grave side. The church of England service, that is the Episcopialian, followed and finally the Nonconformist ruces were performed. As the last words of this service were spoken, the familiar hymn, "Abide With Me," swelled forth.
